Sorry - hit send too early. WH does indeed set salary but we have some say. To help her and them, we need a sense of her salary history and her salary request. Also - any mitigating circumstances, e.g., will she have to relocate here, etc. Then WH will make a determination.

'A Sister' Takes the Helm at E.P.A.By Mireya Navarro

The new Environmental Protection Agency chief, Lisa P. Jackson, chose a national conference of environmental justice groups meeting in New York for her first public appearance as a cabinet member of the new Obama administration.

Speaking at Fordham University's Lincoln Center Campus in Manhattan, Ms. Jackson assured the audience that the new president understands urban issues and the concerns of low income communities who feel disproportionately affected by pollution and other environmental problems. She pledged "a listening ear and a heart" and a commitment to address climate change "based on sound science."

"That ensures that all communities feel at the end of the day that they are all being protected," she said.

Of President Obama, she said: "As long as he's committed to the idea that you don't have to choose between environmental protection and the economy, we have a leg up on the previous administration."

Ms. Jackson has been criticized by some environmentalists for supposedly caving in to business interests on occasion as the former head of New Jersey's Department of Environmental Protection. But the racially diverse audience of several hundred people at Fordham welcomed her with a standing ovation.

The conference, the first national gathering of about 200 groups advocating better environmental protection of low-income and minority communities, developed a position paper seeking to have a voice in any climate change legislation, said Peggy Shepard, executive director of the group WE ACT for Environmental Justice.

"Inclusion has been a big issue," Ms. Shepard said. "You have the big groups, industry and businesses having better access to the agency."

That seems about to change. As the first African-American head of the E.P.A., Ms. Jackson, 46, said she had chosen to speak at the event out of a personal kinship.

"I wanted this to be my first appearance because I'm an African-American woman and an environmentalist and we have similar backgrounds," Ms. Jackson, who was raised in New Orleans and whose 80-year-old mother was evacuated from the city during Hurricane Katrina, said on her way out. "This was very meaningful to me."

The feeling was mutual for Kari Fulton, 23, a youth coordinator with a coalition of environmental justice groups from Washington, who called Ms. Jackson "an inspiration."

"I've been telling people, 'We've got a new head of the E.P.A., and she's a sister,'" Ms. Fulton said.

Lisa,

Here is the current draft of the notice that is responsive to your edits. The package is moving through the agency review process now. Let us know if you have comments.

On a separate note, I understand the process to announce the decision is being worked now. As part of that, need to make sure to think about what to do for key House/Senate members as well as Ca and 177 state governors.

thanks

"I wanted this to be my first appearance because I'm an African-American woman and an environmentalist and we have similar backgrounds," Ms. Jackson, who was raised in New Orleans and whose 80-year-old mother was evacuated from the city during Hurricane Katrina, said on her way out. "This was very meaningful to me."

The feeling was mutual for Kari Fulton, 23, a youth coordinator with a coalition of environmental justice groups from Washington, who called Ms. Jackson "an inspiration."

"I've been telling people, 'We've got a new head of the E.P.A., and she's a sister,'" Ms. Fulton said.

Decisions on Items for my review

Cc: "David McIntosh", "Robert Goulding", "Eric Wachter"

02/02/2009 11:00 AM

This works well as long as you don't mind writing these things out. See decisions below.

1)Waiver notice: You have the near-final version of the notice of reconsideration of the California waiver. I (b) (6) The notice is still making it way through the internal review process here at EPA. I expect that the notice will be ready for your signature tomorrow morning.

Do you have any comments on the notice of reconsideration?

No comments. Does the process for publication for the notice go thru the White House? If so, how would you like to proceed there (e.g., do you want to send them a copy today or just let it follow its normal course?)

Dave and I worked with staff for a new home page, which is not 'live' yet. When you're in the building (because it's on a secure server on the intranet), click the link below to see if you like the update - also swapped out your 'about me' picture to the one with you, VP and Potus in Chicago.

On Friday, I sent you a paragraph to send to the WH, notifying them of this action. Here is the paragraph again (note you might change "today" to "tomorrow" if you're signing the notice tomorrow):

(b) (5)

(b) (5)

2) CAIR: agree staff briefing is good idea. Just had staff briefing on air litigation issues, and I believe they would very much like to have a briefing on CAIR.

(b) (5)

Any reactions to other items on list? (CO2 labeling for cars and talking to reporters re: mercury)

This works well as long as you don't mind writing these things out. See decisions below.

1)Waiver notice: You have the near-final version of the notice of reconsideration of the California waiver. I
(b) (5) The notice is still making it way through the internal review process here at EPA. I expect that the notice will be ready for your signature tomorrow morning.

Do you have any comments on the notice of reconsideration?

No comments. Does the process for publication for the notice go thru the White House? If so, how would you like to proceed there (e.g., do you want to send them a copy today or just let it follow its normal course?)

Hope your event went well. Your office is like a palace. I expected a throne in there.

A few things:

1. I have spoken with Marygrace and she has deferred to me to meet with the speechwriter candidate. Again, he is an OFA person. I've reached out to him already and will hopefully meet with him soon. She said she would take first review of folks - but would defer decision to me/you.

2. I had a helpful conversation with David Cohen - and look to have a follow-up again. I also have more situational awareness about the overall structure of OPA.
